KEITH L. ODOM

INNOVATOR | MINISTRY TECHNOLOGIST | ENTREPRENEUR | PASTOR

Keith Odom is a pioneering voice at the intersection of faith and technology. As the Director of Technology for the Church of God in Christ (COGIC), the largest Pentecostal denomination in the world, Keith leads the denomination's digital transformation strategy—modernizing infrastructure, strengthening cybersecurity, and equipping churches globally to operate with excellence in a digital-first age. His work ensures that technology serves as a tool for greater ministry impact, evangelism, and operational efficiency across the COGIC network.

With roots as a "techie" formed during his time as Senior Fiscal Officer at the renowned MIT Media Lab, Keith developed a passion for innovation while working alongside world-class researchers in disruptive technology. Today, that same drive fuels his leadership as CEO and Solution Architect of Axtegrity Consulting, a Microsoft Solutions Partner specializing in ERP solutions, cloud services, and custom software development.

Keith also leads TechChurch, an Axtegrity subsidiary focused on helping churches and faith-based organizations embrace emerging technologies. Through initiatives like the Church & Technology Summit and The Experia Summit, he creates spaces where pastors, media professionals, and tech leaders come together to be educated, equipped, and empowered for 21st-century ministry.

A devoted son of the Church of God in Christ, Keith serves as the Lead Pastor of The Place of Grace Church (TPoG) in Orlando, Florida—a forward-thinking ministry committed to transformative change. At every level of his work, Keith champions the belief that technology, when grounded in Kingdom purpose, can be a catalyst for revival, reach, and relevance.
